Worldwide Association of Business Coaches Recognizes Local Graduate

The Worldwide Association of Business Coaches (WABC) has awarded Barry Zweibel, of Northbrook, IL, the Certified Executive Coach (CEC) designation. This certification is awarded only to experienced coaches who have a substantive understanding of senior leadership.

Sidney, Canada (PRWEB) — The Worldwide Association of Business Coaches (WABC) has awarded Barry Zweibel, of Northbrook, IL, the Certified Executive Coach (CEC) designation. This certification is awarded only to experienced coaches who have a substantive understanding of senior leadership.

Wendy Johnson, WABC President and CEO, states, “CEC certification includes a rigorous screening process, which ensures candidates are able to demonstrate core competencies essential to working effectively at the highest levels of leadership within any organization.”

As owner of GottaGettaCoach! Incorporated, Zweibel has experience in both the corporate world and executive coaching. Through a combination of coaching, advice and education, Zweibel helps clients implement lasting solutions to specific business challenges. Assignments vary widely, reflecting the needs of individual executives.

Executive coaching is rapidly gaining popularity among corporate leaders and senior managers around the world. It is designed to deliver quantifiable improvements in the executive’s performance, as well as enhance job satisfaction and encourage life balance.

The Worldwide Association of Business Coaches is the only international association dedicated exclusively to business coaches. Its members work with entrepreneurs, managers, CEOs, presidents and business professionals. WABC develops, advances and promotes the emerging profession of business coaching, worldwide.
